Market Overview

April proved to be a volatile month although at the end of it the monthly returns proved far better than they "felt". The main features during the month included a weak dollar (it posted its first monthly decline since June last year), a weak German equity market (the Dax posted its first decline this year but is still up 16.8% since end-December) and strong emerging markets (the MSCI Emerging market index rose 7.5% in April). The MSCI World index ended the month 2.2% higher, leaving the US equity gain of 1.0% virtually unnoticed.

On the back of evidence that the US economy is not growing nearly as fast as had been hoped, the dollar declined against most other currencies, and emerging ones in particular. This in turn assisted emerging equity markets, which had been under pressure for some time, in posting sizable gains. It also helped certain commodity prices recover some lost ground. The euro rose 3.5% against the dollar during April and sterling rose 3.8% against it. The Brazilian real and the Russian rouble rose 8.5% and 12.0% respectively against the greenback. Even the rand strengthened against the weak dollar, although by only 1.5%.

In the bond market, the Barclays Capital Global Aggregate Bond index ended the month 1.1% higher, thanks to the performance of emerging bonds; the US bond market actually declined during the month.

Local market returns

Turning to the South African markets, the All Share index rose 4.7% during April, bringing its year-to-date and annual gain to 10.8% and 14.8% respectively. The basic material index rose 9.1%, while the financial and industrial indices rose 4.2% and 4.1% respectively. Not surprisingly the large cap index, up 5.2%, easily trumped the small and mid-cap indices, which rose 4.1% and 2.1% respectively. The mid-cap index was dragged lower by weakness in the listed retailer space. The All Bond index declined 0.5%.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used.
