Market Overview

December saw volatility increase dramatically in global markets, as the continued declines in the oil price, dramatic weakening of the Russian rouble, and fears about the possibility of Greece leaving the Eurozone, all added to investors' negative sentiment. Sentiment changed sharply as investors took the view that the time horizon for the US Federal Reserve raising interest rates would be pushed out. Markets rallied into year end, reversing some of their sharp losses seen earlier in the month.

Looking at the performances of global markets in 2014, we saw another year of outperformance by developed market equities over emerging market equities, as the MSCI World Index rose 2.9% ahead of the MSCI Emerging Market Index, which fell 4.6% over the year. Within developed markets, the US led the gains with the S&P 500 Index rising 14.0% ahead of the Japanese Nikkei, which rose 7.1%, and Europe was the laggard with the German DAX gaining 2.7% and the UK FTSE 100 declining 2.7% for 2014. Within emerging markets, China's Shanghai index led the gains, rising 52.9%, India's BSE rose 29.9%, and Turkey's BIST100 gained 26.4%. The notable underperformers were the Brazilian Bovespa, which declined 2.9% and Russian RTS which fell 45.4%.

Commodities were weak over the year, with big declines seen in the bulk commodity space, as the price of coal fell 25.4% and iron ore declined 45.9%. Base metals had a mixed performance, as nickel and aluminium rose 7.4% and 2.6% respectively, while copper declined 14.7%. Gold declined 0.2%, whereas platinum fell 10.6% and silver 19.3%. Brent

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used.
