Market Overview

The New Year began where 2014 left off, with volatility continuing to be a dominant theme in markets. Key developments during the month included the announcement by the Swiss National Bank that the peg of the Swiss franc to the euro would be released. The result was a dramatic gain in the franc (it ended the day 23.8% higher), a sharp fall in Swiss equities and a general increase in volatility in markets. The announcement of 1.1 trillion euro quantitative easing program by the European Central Bank was, however, the catalyst to move financial markets higher from their intra-month lows in January.

On the whole, developed market equities underperformed emerging market equities, as the MSCI World Index declined 1.9%, while the MSCI Emerging Market Index rose 0.6% in January. US equities lagged with the S&P 500 declining 2.9% compared to the 9.1% gain in the German DAX. Within emerging markets, the Indian BSE rose 6.1%, while the Brazilian Bovespa declined 6.2%, and the dollar based Russian RTS fell 6.4%.

Commodities were generally weaker, with oil taking another step lower, declining 9.7% during the month. Gold gained 5.1% despite the strong US dollar, however, copper and iron ore had another weak month, declining 12.6% and 12.8% respectively. Overall, the S&P Goldman Sachs Commodity Index declined 8.1% during the month and is down a dramatic 37.8% over the past 12 months!

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used. Maestro Investment Management (Pty) Limited and Prescient Life Limited are members of the Association for Savings and Investments of South Africa (ASISA).
