Market Overview

Global equity and bond markets were weaker during June as the crisis in Greece, the volatility in the Chinese equity markets and speculation that the US Federal Reserve will raise interest rates in September all weighed on investor sentiment.

The level of volatility in Chinese equity markets was remarkable during June as double digit percentage trading ranges were recorded on some days in the Shanghai Composite during the month. Investors concerned with inflated valuations were the sellers while those hopeful for more government stimulus to boost markets speculated that the market would move higher which exacerbated volatility.

Taking a look at equity market performances, the MSCI World and Emerging market indices declined 2.5% and 3.2% respectively. A noteworthy stand out during the month was the 4.7% increase in the German equity market. Other development markets fared worse with the UK market falling 6.6%, Hong Kong 4.3%, the US 1.9% and Japan 1.6%. Emerging equity markets saw China decline 7.3%, Indonesia 5.9%, Russia 3.0% and India 0.2%.

Within the currency space the dollar lost a bit of ground against most currencies, falling 3.1%, 1.6% and 0.3% against the pound, euro and rand respectively. Commodity prices were generally weak despite the weaker dollar. Oil declined for the second month in a row, falling 2.9%. Gold, platinum and silver were all weak declining 1.7%, 3.3% and 5.8% respectively. Base metals and bulk commodities were also weaker on the month. Soft commodity (mainly food-related) prices, however were firm.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used. Maestro Investment Management (Pty) Limited and Prescient Life Limited are members of the Association for Savings and Investments of South Africa (ASISA).
