Market Overview

After the strong markets experienced during October, it was unsurprising to see them take a breather during November. There are so many variables influencing global markets at the moment one could choose any number of them to describe why markets moved as they did. Markets were holding up rather well under the circumstances until news of, and concern about, the Omicron variant of the Covid-19 virus rattled markets late in the month, causing them to end the month lower.

As is frequently the case during times of investor nervousness the dollar strengthened, rising 2.0% against a trade-weighted basket of currencies during the month. That caused commodity markets to end the month lower; they were also weighed down by concerns that a new variant induced slowdown might reduce demand for commodities. Within the commodity complex, the oil price was a major casualty, falling 19.7% on the month.

Within the equity market complex, the MSCI World index lost 2.3%, trimming its year-to-date gain to 15.3%. The MSCI Emerging Market index lost 4.1%, the Russian equity market lost 10.7% while the Indian market lost 3.8%. The Chinese market rose 0.5% but Hong Kong continued to decline sharply, losing 7.5% on the month. Investors continue to flee the region on the back of the aggressive regulatory action on the part of the Chinese authorities. The UK and German equity markets lost 2.5% and 3.8% respectively, while the US market lost only 0.7%. The Swiss equity market rose 0.4% and the tech-heavy NASDAQ market 0.3%. The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond index declined 0.3%, showing that bonds didn't really provide any protection against the equity market declines.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used.
