Market Overview

As though the volatility during August wasn't enough, when China devalued their currency following weak economic data, September saw global markets galvanized ahead of the US Federal Reserve's meeting on 17 September, which was surely one of the most anticipated central bank meetings of the past few decades. Opinion was split regarding whether or not the Fed would hike US interest rates for the first time since the 2007/9 Great Financial Crisis. In the event the Fed kept rates unchanged

Not surprisingly, the markets peaked just before or on September 17, and since then have been trapped in a downward spiral, which has been associated with the most volatility we have seen this year so far, perhaps even since 2011. Almost any conceivable scenario in the light of present economic conditions is negative for commodity prices, and thus also for developing economies

The MSCI World index fell 3.9%, led lower by declines in Japan, which lost 8.0% in the face of a stronger (+1.2%) yen. The German market lost 5.8%, helped in part by the VW scandal. The UK market lost 3.0% and the US ended down 2.5%. The MSCI Emerging Market index declined 3.3%, with Brazil down 3.4%, Russia 4.2% and China 4.8%. India declined only 0.5% while South Africa rose 1.0% but declined 3.2% in dollar terms.

The stronger dollar had a negative effect on commodity prices although the declines during September were less severe than during August. The platinum price lost 8.3%, oil 2.7% and iron ore 1.1% although the prices of copper, silver, nickel, aluminium and palladium all rose.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used. Maestro Investment Management (Pty) Limited and Prescient Life Limited are members of the Association for Savings and Investments of South Africa (ASISA).
