Market Overview

The year started off on a strong foot, with large gains in just about all markets, and in Hong Kong and China in particular. Then the day-trading phenomenon caused significant market disruption and concern, causing markets to sell off sharply during the last week of January. A welcome change was to see the dollar firm again; it only rose 0.7% in January, and so did not inflict too much damage on other markets. The rand lost 2.4% against the dollar and commodity prices ended the month mixed; the 13.8% gain in the oil price was a feature during the month. The Bloomberg Aggregate Global Bond index lost 0.9% on the month, but is still 6.9% higher than a year ago.

The MSCI Emerging Market index was a standout feature during January, It rose 3.0% (but was a lot firmer than that until the final week of the month) whereas the MSCI World index, consisting of developed markets, lost 1.1%. The Hong Kong stock market rose 3.9% and China eked out a 0.3% gain, but the Indian equity market lost 3.3%, as did the Brazilian market. US, German and Swiss equity markets lost 1.0%, 2.1%, and 1.1% respectively.

A feature throughout the month was the strength of the mid and small sectors in respective markets: the S&P Mid and Small cap indices rose 1.5% and 6.2% in January, although, as with all assets, they were higher by a much greater margin until the last week of the month. In short, despite the relatively modest gains, the year is off to a reasonable start and this strength has continued into February, notwithstanding all the market nonsense that prevailed during the last week of January (which is not to suggest it has ended or will go away soon).

Local market returns

Turning to the South African markets, the rand's weakness (-2.4%) and a very strong showing by Tencent, lifting Naspers to a 15.2% return on the month, helped the All Share index rise 5.2%. The Industrial index rose 8.4% and the Basic Material index 5.0%, but the Financial index lost 2.6%. The Mid and Small cap indices rose 2.6% and 3.9% respectively, while the All Bond index rose 0.7%. Discovery declined 16.2%, Afrimat fell 7.0%, Firstrand 6.4%, Transaction Capital 3.6%, Capitec 3.2% and Standard Bank 0.9% - note just how weak financial shares were. On a more positive note, Ninety One rose 5.7%, Richemont 6.7%, Billiton 7.2%, the MSCI Chinese ETF 7.3%, Aspen 14.1%, Naspers 15.2% and Cashbuild 20.3%.

Monthly fund returns

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used. Maestro Investment Management (Pty) Limited and 27Four Life Limited are members of the Association for Savings and Investments of South Africa (ASISA).
