Market Overview

As is often the case, the headline index movements during March belie the significant underlying volatility experienced during the month. For example, the US equity market ended March up 3.7%, but was down 4.7% at the intra-month trough. The German equity market ended down 0.3%, but was 11.3% lower at its intra-month trough. The MSCI World index rose 2.5%, while the MSCI Emerging Market index lost 2.5%. The Chinese equity market lost 6.1% during March, and the Hong Kong market lost 3.2%.

Commodity markets experienced extreme movements, particularly those where Russian or Ukraine feature highly as significant providers of those commodities. Oil is an obvious affected commodity, with the price of Brent crude oil rising 9.7%, though it had been up as much as 42.5% intra-month. Palladium is another affected metal; it declined 2.8% on the month although it did rise 23.2% in January. The price of nickel rose 33.0% during the month. The Bloomberg Global Aggregated Bond index lost 3.1% in March, and has lost 6.2% so far this year.

There are many other unusual market movements to report, such as the 14.8% rise in the Turkish equity market, or the 6.1% rise in the Brazilian equity market. Add to that the appreciation of the Brazilian real of 17.4% over the same period, and one lands up with a 34.3% return from Brazilian equities in dollar terms so far this year. This places the SA equity market's 19.9% year-to-date return in dollar terms into perspective. The common feature is that both markets, and economies for that matter, are reliant on commodity exports for their well-being.

Returns for periods ended 31 March 2022

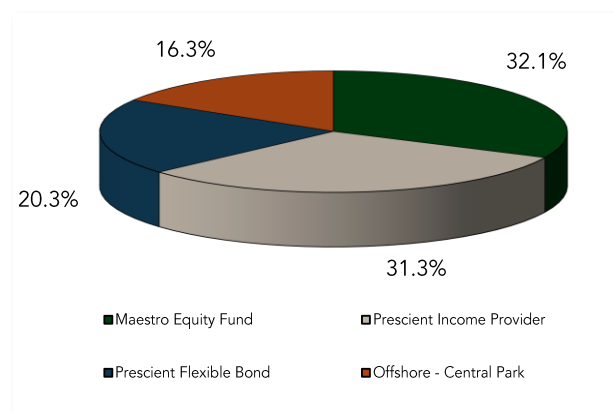

Turning to South African equity market returns during March, the All Share index ended the month just about where it started. The respective declines of 1.5% and 4.3% in the Basic Material, and Industrial indices, stand in contrast to the 10.9% rise in the Financial index. The Large, Mid, and Small cap indices returned -0.8%, 6.3% and 4.8% respectively. The All Bond index rose 0.5% during March, despite the bloodbath in global bond markets. Shares which disappointed included Richemont, which fell 8.6%. The Satrix Resource ETF fell 3.2%, Ninety One 2.4%, and Aspen 1.2%. On the upside, Transaction Capital, Standard Bank, Capitec, Discovery, and Firststrand rose 11.7%, 12.0%, 12.9%, 15.4%, and 17.2% respectively, showing just how strong the prices of financial companies were. Renergen’s 15.8% gain also did no harm.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used.
