Market Overview

Equity markets were exceptionally strong in October, posting their largest monthly gains since late 2011. Growing speculation of further delays in the US Federal Reserve raising of interest rates as well as strong indications that the European Central Bank would loosen monetary policy further were the key drivers of market gains.

The MSCI World index gained 7.8%, slightly ahead of the MSCI Emerging market index's gain of 7.0%. Within developed markets, the US equity market rose 8.5%, Japan 9.8% and Germany 12.3% during the month. The UK market rose 4.9% while France gained 9.9% over the month. The S&P Mid and Small cap indices rose 5.5% and 6.0% respectively. Emerging markets were led by the 10.8% gain in China; its annual gain to end-October is still a respectable 39.8% despite the massive sell-off earlier this year. India and Brazil posted disappointing gains of only 1.9% and 1.8% respectively.

The rand was relatively flat against the US dollar while the pound strengthened 1.8% and the euro lost 1.2% against the greenback. Commodity prices were mixed, with gold and platinum prices gaining 2.5% and 8.8% respectively while base metals and bulk commodities were weaker. Significant declines were seen in the iron ore price which fell 9.0% during the month. Overall the S&P Goldman Sachs Commodity Index rose 1.1%.

Bond markets ended the month flat; the Barclays Capital US Aggregate index ended the month unchanged while the Global Aggregate index rose 0.1%.

Units in linked insurance policies should be considered as medium to long-term investments. The value of units may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. Unit prices are calculated on a net asset basis, which is the total value of all the assets in the portfolio including any income accruals and less any permissible deductions (Brokerage, Securities Transfer Tax, VAT, Auditor's fees, Bank Charges, Custodian fees and the annual Management fee) from the portfolio divided by the number of units in issue. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of any underlying international investments to go up and down. Forward pricing is used. Maestro Investment Management (Pty) Limited and Prescient Life Limited are members of the Association for Savings and Investments of South Africa (ASISA).
